Headline:
Sunny spells then scattered showers, becoming windy in the west.

Today:
A bright start with sunny spells. A scattering of blustery showers developing, these becoming heavier and more widespread in the northwest later, especially for Lochaber. Winds also strengthening, gales around the west coast.

Tonight:
Windy with blustery showers in the west, a few heavy showers at times, feeling quite autumnal here. Drier with clear spells in the east but windy for everyone.

Friday:
A windy day for all of Scotland and cloudy in the west with blustery showers, brighter with fewer showers in the east.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Winds easing although turning northerly so feeling cooler, some showers at first but generally fine on Saturday. Rain in the south on Sunday, cloudy for most. Mostly dry on Monday.
